A creator calls a Suffolk pumpkin patch the UK's “most depressing”

Instagram creator @alexdodman posted “a real review” of Suffolk's Pumpkin Patch in Barton Mills, with “Glasgow Willy Wonka vibes”. He said it cost £19.52 for a family of five. The family-run organisers, in their first year, replied: “At the end of the day we are only humans.”

> Why it matters: Half-term days out are under the microscope. Honest reviews of family attractions travel fast in Halloween week.

Rising UK X

Dune: Part Three tickets spark huge online queues

IMAX 70mm tickets went on sale on Tuesday morning at only three UK cinemas: BFI IMAX, the Science Museum and Vue Manchester Printworks. One X user claimed “at least 65,000 people” were in the BFI queue in the first minute. The film opens on 18 Dec.

> Why it matters: Queue screenshots are content in their own right. Fans turn a ticket sale into a shared event.

SNL UK calls out Shane Gillis, and viewers feel “patriotic”

Cast member Ania Magliano used a mock news segment to answer Shane Gillis's controversial monologue on the US show, with a photo of him on screen and some strong language. Viewers replied “suddenly i'm patriotic” and “That's not a jab that's a knock out”.

> Why it matters: UK audiences love a home-grown answer to a US moment. Local takes on global rows get shared.

Rising Global Instagram

Elizabeth Holmes's stare in a new teaser feels “uncanny valley”

The teaser for Nathan Fielder's documentary You Can See Everything shows Holmes asking him: “Why would I deceive you?” Viewers called it “creepy and awkward” and “uncanny valley”. Microexpressions expert Annie Särnblad broke down the stare on Instagram after a “ton of DMs”.

> Why it matters: One unsettling expression became a format: experts and creators react to the clip frame by frame.

TikTok Shop adds shoppable carousels for UK sellers

UK merchants can now post shoppable carousels of two or more images (five to seven recommended). New live tools include group deals that unlock a discount at a sales target, “second chance” auctions and stock reserved for lives.

> Why it matters: Carousels become a shopping format on TikTok in the UK, just in time for Christmas gifting.

YouTube Shopping adds AliExpress, including in the UK

Creators in the US, Brazil, the UK and Germany can now tag AliExpress products through YouTube's affiliate programme. It launched in South Korea in March. UK creators joined the affiliate programme in August, and YouTube aims for 35 markets by the end of 2026.

> Why it matters: More creators can earn from product tags, so expect more haul and try-on videos in the run-up to Christmas.

Snap hires Robert Downey Jr to sell its Specs glasses

Robert Downey Jr is Snap's new “Chief Customer Experience Officer” for Specs, its AR glasses. He'll front original video episodes on the Specs site and YouTube. Specs are on pre-order in the US at $2,195.

> Why it matters: A celebrity title instead of a plain ad. Expect more brands to give famous faces made-up job titles.
